KOELADEO NATIONAL PARK

Koeladeo National Park, also known as Bharatpur Bird Sanctuary, is a renowned avian paradise located in Bharatpur, Rajasthan, India. It was established in 1982 and designated as a UNESCO World Heritage Site in 1985. Spanning over 29 square kilometers, the park is famous for its diverse and abundant bird population, attracting birdwatchers and nature enthusiasts from around the world.

The park's unique ecosystem comprises wetlands, marshes, woodlands, and grasslands, providing an ideal habitat for more than 350 species of birds, including migratory birds that travel from as far as Siberia, Europe, and Central Asia. Among the notable avian residents are the rare Siberian crane, painted stork, egret, heron, pelican, and many species of ducks, geese, and raptors.

Visiting Koeladeo National Park provides a unique and enriching experience, allowing visitors to immerse themselves in the beauty of nature, witness incredible birdlife, and appreciate the importance of preserving our natural heritage.

Aside from its avian wonders, Koeladeo National Park is also home to various mammal species like spotted deer, sambar deer, wild boars, and mongoose. The park offers opportunities for wildlife safaris, where visitors can explore its picturesque landscapes and encounter its rich biodiversity up close, it is a true gem for nature enthusiasts and wildlife lovers. Originally a hunting ground for the maharajas (kings) of Bharatpur, it was later declared a national park in 1982 and gained recognition as a Ramsar Wetland site.
